

Building Better School-Community Relations in Latin-American Communities

Date
1944-07-01

Author
👤 Tinsley, Willa Vaughn

Metadata
Show full metadata

Abstract
Originally published by Southwest Texas State Teachers College as a part of a school-community project in Inter-American Teacher Education, made possible by the Office of Education through a grant from the Office of the Coordinator in Inter-American Affairs. This is No. 3 in this special series of bulletins.

Uri
<https://digital.library.txstate.edu/handle/10877/4002>

Collections
Faculty Publications-Family and Consumer Sciences

Download

Name:
fulltext.pdf
Size:
864.2Kb
Format:
PDF

Download

The fundamental framework of OC Human Relations' Community Building, Mediation, and BRIDGES programs are empowerment strategies rooted in grass roots organizing, diverse leadership development, and creative conflict resolution. Back to Top. Antonio Benitez, Human Relations Specialist, (714-480-6586) grew up in the Oak View neighborhood of Huntington Beach, CA and graduated from San Diego State University with a B.A. in Latin American Studies. While in college, Antonio became aware of his agency and advocated for social justice issues through his involvement in student groups MEChA de SDSU and U The Community of Latin American and Caribbean States (CELAC) is an intergovernmental mechanism for dialogue and political agreement, which includes permanently thirty-three countries in Latin America and the Caribbean. It is a regional forum that brings together all of Latin America and the Caribbean countries. Celac aspires to be a unique voice and structured decision-making policy decisions in the political and. After two years of work, the CELAC has encouraged Latin American and Caribbean vision itself as a community of nations, capable of dialogue and consensus building on issues of common interest. By mandate of the Heads of State and Government, CELAC is the unified voice of the region on issues of consensus.